

Pro MHI Africa
EU-African University Network to strengthen community-based micro health insurance

CONFERENCE ANNOUNCEMENT

Conference of the network Pro MHI Africa “Lessons learnt and lessons to learn in the field of Micro Health Insurance in Africa” - December 2nd and 3rd 2009 in Lilongwe, Malawi -

Pro MHI Africa is an EU-African university network consisting of a multifaceted team of researchers from four universities in Botswana, Germany, Ghana and Malawi aiming at analysing the potential, efficiency and sustainability of Micro Health Insurance in the three cooperating African countries. Within the two year project, the Pro MHI Africa team has been conducting a comparative household survey in Botswana, Ghana and Malawi and at the same time developing common teaching and training modules in the field of Micro Health Insurance for university students as well as microinsurance practitioners. Furthermore, a common Handbook of Micro Health Insurance in Africa will be published.

Objectives of the Final Conference of Pro MHI Africa in Lilongwe

The international Pro MHI Africa team will hold a final conference at the end of its two year project in December 2009 in Lilongwe. The conference will constitute a platform for various microinsurance stakeholders in Africa and worldwide. Main objectives are the following:

I Presentation of common Project outcomes

Common research results and general outcomes of the two year project will be presented at the conference and hence new information on the potential, efficiency and sustainability of Micro Health Insurance in Botswana, Ghana and Malawi will be disseminated. This presentation will form the basis for an open discussion on these topics. New evidence was gathered mainly within qualitative research as well as in the context of an extensive comparative household survey conducted in Botswana, Ghana and Malawi in 2008 and 2009.

II Insurance Education in Malawi and Best Paper Award

A further aim of the conference is to raise awareness on Micro Health Insurance in Malawi as the common spread of micro health insurance units has not entered Malawi yet. Besides a presentation of the main research results of the Pro MHI Africa project in Malawi the winners of the Malawian Best Paper Award will be proclaimed. Furthermore, a round table with important stakeholders in the field of Micro Health Insurance in Malawi is intended to discuss further steps as well as initiate the establishment of a national network between potential micro health insurance practitioners, researchers and supporters in Malawi.

III Exchange and Dissemination of latest research results on Micro Health insurance in Africa

The Pro MHI Africa team would like to bring together national and international microfinance, microinsurance and micro health insurance experts in the context of the final conference to initiate a common discussion about the status of Micro Health Insurance in Africa. Therefore, several authors of the official Pro MHI Africa Handbook of Micro Health Insurance in Africa will join the conference and present their papers as well as conduct interactive workshops on specific topics.

Please note: Pro MHI Africa is still searching for contributions to the Pro MHI Africa Handbook of Micro Health Insurance in Africa. The official CALL FOR PAPERS remains open until 20th of July! Accepted papers are supposed to be presented at the conference as well.
